Asking Questions for Twenty-Five Years

Traffic may be moving slowly but transport is changing fast.

In 1984, Lansdowne's research came up with the now familiar name of DART.
Fast track to 2004 and the arrival of the Luas..!

You constantly need to keep track with your market...as it changes.

Lansdowne has the experience and the resources to provide the answers to all of your questions...
...generating the insight you demand.

So, in this our 25th year, call us to update your perceptions.
